

Minicourse: Quantitative Biology
22–23 September 2007

Sniffers, Buzzers, Toggles and Blinkers

John Tyson

*Department of Biology, MC 0406
Virginia Polytechnic Institute & State University
Blacksburg, VA 24061
USA
tyson@vt.edu*

Abstract

The reaction networks in living cells can often be decomposed into simple ‘motifs’ that perform recognizable functions, such as switches, oscillators and filters. Mathematical models of these motifs reveal their dynamical potentials, and permit the motifs to be joined together into computable representations of complex, realistic, accurate and predictive models of cell behavior.